Orange is the New Black:

My Year in a Women's Prison

In her memoir "Orange is the New Black", Piper Kerman recounts the year that she spent in the Danbury Correctional Facility for a crime she had committed ten years prior as a very brief, very careless dalliance in the world of drug trafficking. Piper's story is compelling, moving, and often hilarious. She'll share with you the stories of the women she met while in prison; raise issues of friendship and family and mental illness. You'll hear about the odd cliques and codes of behavior, the role of religion, the uneasy relationship between prisoner and jailor, and the almost complete lack of guidance for life after prison. Piper's memoir was adapted into a Netflix series. The show today is a runaway success and legitimized Netflix as a formidable source of original programming.
